QSA supports projects in Cambodia, India, Uganda, Zimbabwe and Philippines, as well as refugee, asylum seeker and First Nations communities in Australia. QSA works with long-term partners who understand their communities' needs, providing ongoing grassroots support to ensure local people are actively involved, and activities are appropriate to their needs, interests and situations. In total, 5,200 people participate in our international projects.

Focus areas include food security, poverty reduction, ecology and climate adaptation, water security, nutrition, gender equality, female empowerment, child protection and inclusiveness. Rural women are vital as the mainstay of many communities so much of our work involves empowering them and enhancing their economic capabilities. We focus on helping women build skills in organic farming methods and establish home food gardens to provide nutritious food for their family year-round.
